My values and money

Take a moment to think about your personal and life values. They affect how you think about and how you deal with money.

Step 1: Identify your life values

Mark how important each of the values in the table below are to you. Include any values that are not in the list under "Other".

Values	Must have	Would like	Not important
Being physically healthy
Being emotionally healthy
Being in a satisfying and healthy romantic relationship
Having close friendships
Having and raising happy and healthy children
Completing my education or saving for my children's education
Having a fulfilling career or doing work that I enjoy
Having a sense of belonging or being part of a group
Helping others
Being adventurous or travelling
Feeling attractive or being admired by others
Being at peace with myself
Having free time for leisure and hobbies
Following the traditions of my culture
Living by religious beliefs
Having status and prestige
Having material possessions
Growing as a person or learning new things
Being able to support myself financially
Other:
Other:
Other:

My values and money

Step 2: Prioritize and examine your values

Examine your top three values and reflect on why they are important to you and how they affect the way you spend money.

Value 1
This is important to me because:
This affects the way I spend money by:
Value 2
This is important to me because:
This affects the way I spend money by:
Value 3
This is important to me because:
This affects the way I spend money by:
This affects the way i spend money by.

Step 3: Analyze your spending using your values

You can continue to self-reflect on your values as you create or modify a budget. As you track your spending, look at each item that you spend money on and ask yourself the following questions:

- 1. Does this align with my values? (Yes or no)
- 2. What value does it align with?
- 3. Is there a substitute to meet the same value that costs less?

Clear the form	Save	Print
----------------	------	-------	--